

Rachel Silverman is a certified coach and trusted advisor to business leaders with nearly 30 years spent designing and executing programs in business development, leadership, communications, community engagement and diversity. Her breadth of knowledge includes practicing as an attorney, leading business development and marketing for AmLaw 100 and boutique firms, and gaining valuable experience at both large media corporations and tech start-ups.

Rachel earned a BA from Lehigh University and JD from Fordham University School of Law. She lives in Stone Ridge with her husband, two daughters (when they are home from college) and her dog. She loves to bake (she's pretty good) and garden (she is less good), and she can't resist a local garage sale.
